NEW ABSTRACT

A depilating apparatus includes a housing that contains a supply of a depilating tape, and a heating device for heating the depilating tape. An application roller is provided for applying the heated depilating tape to the skin of a person. In addition, a determination device is provided, which is designed to determine, as desired, different application lengths, along which application length the depilating tape adheres to the skin of a person after application of the depilating tape.
